1. The Far East Academy is on Alexander Street, Moscow, about 550 yards south-west of Alexander Park and about one mile and a half north of the Moscow subway stop (sic). The school was established in July 1925 by the Communist Party of the USSR in order to train cadres from countries of the Far East to carry on the work of the party. The operation of the school has been kept secret outside the party leadership. Students are not permitted to go outside the building, except on conducted trips to industrial and cultural institutions. Therefore, the school is well furnished to take care of the students' physical, educational, and extracurricular needs.
2. About 2,800 students were trained at the Far East Academy between April 1928 and July 1949. All of these students, including 800 Soviet graduates, occupy positions of leadership in the Communist Parties of their various countries.
3. The school is directly under the Politburo, which defrays the expense of about 1,000,000 rubles* a month. Students are chosen from among the model Communists in the national Communist Parties of the Far East. These students must pass a series of 20 difficult tests given by their national Communist Party, the Far East Committee of the International Party (sic), and the Politburo of the USSR. Thus the students, as well as the instructors, are of the highest caliber. There is no racial segregation, although the Soviets monopolize most of the student self-government offices. Most of the effort of the instructors is spent on the foreign students, while the Soviets in attendance concentrate on language study.
4. Statistics on the school are as follows:
 - a. Graduates of the 14 term (May 1947 - July 1949): 200 men, 100 women. Breakdown by races: Soviet 100, Chinese 66, Korean 3, and others 19.
 - b. Instructors: 41. Full time professors, 8 men, 2 women. Part time professors, 26 men, 5 women.
